LIFE INSURANCE IN NEW YORK.

Mr. William Barnes, Superintendent of the Insurance Department of New York, has just made a report, of which the salient features are those bearing on life insurance. Mr. Barnes refers to the decay of the life insurance business in Great Britain during the past fifteen years, and says:

[illegible]

Compare this picture with the condition in which life insurance in England must have been when Mr. Dickens cleverly satirized it by his lively picture of the success of Mr. Montague Tigg's "Anglo-Bengalee Disinterested Mutual Loan and Benefit Company." Life insurance had then been rising in importance in England for about twenty years, the period required to test its endurance. It then culminated, and has since declined, falling into continually increasing distrust. Of its present condition in England Mr. Barnes says:

[illegible]

Life insurance in America began twenty years later than in England, and, says Mr. Barnes, "cannot be said to have been established over a quarter of a century." It has not yet reached the test period. Hence, we find it in so good demand here that on the failure of the recent "International Life Assurance" Society of London, which had an office in New York, it was found that the receipts on the new insurances effected in New York, had been used for a long time to pay the losses on the old policies falling due in London. Here the business was new and was enjoying its seven years of plenty. There it was old, and its seven years of famine were absorbing the receipts obtained from the business done in New York. The evils which have led to the decline of life insurance in England are not entirely unknown here. Says Superintendent Barnes:

[illegible]

Mr. Barnes' general summary for the State shows that the New York State companies have insured to the amount of $[illegible],710.48, and the companies of other States, doing business in New York, to the amount of $[illegible],474,974.67; that the annual premiums paid are [illegible] per cent on the amount in force; the losses are seven-tenths of one per cent of the amount in force, and the existing assets are 11 per cent of the amount in force. He endorses the American Experience Tables, founded mainly on the experience of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York. But he does not show what will be the condition of life insurance in America when it has reached that stage in its maturity and history corresponding to the present period in that of Great Britain. [illegible]

THE ST. LOUIS CONVENTION.

The [illegible] invitation of Governor Baker, of Indiana, to appoint delegates for that State to the convention called by citizens of St. Louis relative to the removal of the capital, is apparently an indication of his opinion that the call for the convention [illegible]

[illegible]

PRINCE NAPOLEON FOR SPAIN.

... not a legitimate Bonapartist, but illegitimate from a Catholic point of view. Whether this would form any obstacle to his election to the Spanish throne can only be determined at the meeting of the Cortes in October. Meanwhile the Prince has every personal advantage. His person, and features strongly resemble those of Napoleon the First, whereas he enjoys a pre-eminence over Napoleon III., in whom there is no visible or historical evidence that any of the blood of a Bonaparte flows, as his reputed father—Louis, King of Holland—always denied that the present Emperor was his offspring. The Prince has been a Republican, and is still deemed liberal, in which point of view he would be popular with the Republicans of Spain. Being a Catholic, and, apart from his illegitimacy, he would be acceptable to the Church. He is a gentleman of more than average address and ability, who would fill the Spanish throne with more personal dignity than either of his rivals, and would bring more power into the government. He would be warmly sustained by Napoleon III., from the general reason that his election to the Spanish throne, from which his uncle, Joseph, was driven, would be a new vindication of the majesty of Bonapartism, and for the special reason that it would remove from France a dangerous rival both to himself and his son. The election of Prince Napoleon would bring the moral power of France to the support of order in Spain, and, though it would vastly increase the existing prestige and power of Napoleon III., that result would not cause it to be regarded with so much apprehension as would have been felt when the genius of Napoleon III. seemed more aggressive and warlike than it has of late appeared.

THE CONTEST IN MISSISSIPPI.

The attempt of the Mississippi ex-rebel Democracy to make use of Dent as a means of bribing President Grant to sustain the reactionary party in that State, has been properly exposed before the country, and snubbed by the President. It has fallen dead. If the Mississippi retrogrades now nominate this defaulting carpet-bagger and office-broker, just now of Washington and late of California, who has not a permanent residence in Mississippi, in place of responsible citizens of their own State, they will at once insult and offend the President, whose supposed family vanity they attempt to bribe; they will incur the hostility of the administration, and it is hard to see wherein they will encourage their party in Mississippi. This Dent is hardly in the humblest sense a lawyer or a Judge. Some corner gathering or cross-road district in California elected him Justice of the Peace. Without distinguishing himself in this exalted judicial field, he started a plantation in Mississippi, and failed to pay his bills. Thence he drifted to Washington, in the hope that his relationship to General Grant would in some way make his fortune. He appears to belong to that class of "strikers" described in a late article by Mr. Parton, who see where some good thing has fallen, will fall, or may be made to fall, and strike for a share of it. Thus far his share has been infinitesimally small, and is likely to grow less. The division of parties in Mississippi is of that nature that the reactionists would have liked extremely to have counted the President on their side. For, at the last reconstruction election, with Johnson against them at Washington, and General Gillem commanding the district, a bitter Johnsonite, and Governor Humphreys in control of the State, an ex-Confederate General, the Republicans came within 7,000 of carrying their new constitution and electing their ticket. Indeed, as the registration shows a clear surplus of 17,000 black votes over white, and as from 12,000 to 15,000 white votes are confidently counted on for the Republican ticket and the new constitution, and the colored vote will be thrown for them almost solid, it is obvious that without some outside help the reactionists would be beaten by the figures before going into the fight. Hence the prodigious stress they have laid on the Dent movement.

They will now, however, probably nominate one of their own men, while the Republicans have in view for their State ticket some thoroughly trustworthy men, to be headed, very probably, by General West, an old Mississippian, and President of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, for Governor. With such a ticket the issue in Mississippi will be reduced mainly to one between all who desire the progress of the people and the building up of the business interests, levees, railroads and schools of the State on the one hand, and those who cling to the hope of restoring black subjugation or displacing the negro by cheap coolie labor on the other. The division will be one of issue and spirit, not easily to be expressed in a platform, but easily to be felt by every citizen and voter of the State. It will be between those who desire to revive the infamous black code enacted in Mississippi by the Johnson Reconstruction Convention, whereby land and rights are confined to whites, and the taxes are levied on the blacks. This code stands unrepealed, and would still be the law of the State were not its enforcement arrested by the military power. The new constitution, on the contrary, is liberal. None are excluded from voting by it, except those who are disfranchised under the Reconstruction laws, viz., those who, after taking an official oath to sustain the government, perjured themselves by joining in the rebellion. These are not more than three or four thousand. The registration has been liberally conducted. The ex-rebels have really no grievance, except the rapid disappearance of all prospect of the restoration of slavery. They still fondly cling to the hope that a Democratic President may be elected in 1872, and in that event the Reconstruction laws may be set aside, and separate black codes framed which may reduce the colored race en masse to subjection to the whites. The Republican party in Mississippi is not abundantly supplied with effective leaders or good speakers for stumping the State, but it has some of the right sort, and these will do yeoman service. We look confidently for a Republican victory by 10,000 majority at the approaching election. Then let the Republican party devote itself to progressive issues, to free schools, to reform in the financial administration of the State, to laws promoting the easy purchase of lands (say by an increased tax on all lands in excess of a certain fair and moderate quantity, the tax increasing as the quantity increases, after the manner of our tax on incomes), the rebuilding of the levees, and the protection of all classes of citizens in their personal rights, &c. Under such policies, Mississippi may successfully invite immigration, may quadruple in a few years the value of her lands throughout the State, may blot out her ancient reputation for repudiation and bowie knives, and may stand forth one of the most orderly, wealthy and rapidly advancing States of the Mississippi Valley.

COOK COUNTY NORMAL SCHOOL.

The training school, established two years ago by the Board of Supervisors of this county, for the purpose of training teachers for the county schools outside of the city, has reached the first crisis in its history. It was originally located at Blue Island, but during the vacation has been removed to Englewood, where a suitable structure is now growing. The fall term will be opened in the public school building, and it is expected that the permanent "habitation" will be occupied in January next.

From the report, just issued, we learn that the school has been attended during the past two years by [illegible] pupils, of whom [illegible] belonged during the second year; [illegible] of the number had taught before entering the school. The graduating class of 1869 numbered twenty-[illegible], of whom twelve have been appointed to situations as teachers within schools of this county, at salaries ranging from $400 to $1,000 per annum.

When the school was first established, the wisdom of the step was extremely doubted, but we believe that the institution is now generally conceded to be a very useful one, promising to exert a material influence in raising the educational status of our county schools. The corps of instructors is a full and able one.

There are about 230 schoolhouses in the county, outside the city, with an attendance of 27,400 pupils. The teachers number about 400, of whom four-fifths are young women. Estimating the average service of a lady teacher at five years, the requirements of the County [illegible] will be over one hundred per year. [illegible] difficulty in finding persons willing to fill this number of situations, but it has hitherto been impossible to find anything like a sufficient number of competent teachers. As a consequence, very many of the schools have been taught in a very unsatisfactory manner, and the results have been far below those which might have been obtained with teachers properly trained for the work.

The design of the Cook County Normal School being to produce teachers rather than scholars, applicants are required to show a fair degree of proficiency in the ordinary school studies, and to sign a declaration of their intention to teach. To such the school is free, if residents of the county; non-residents are charged thirty dollars per year, the money thus received being applied to the purchase of school furniture and works of reference. The course extends over a period of two years, in which time the student is properly trained in the art of communicating knowledge to others, and grows into those habits of discipline without which the schoolroom is a Babel and instruction a failure.

The new site of the "Normal" is at the junction of the Michigan Southern, Rock Island & Pacific and Fort Wayne Railroads, only seven miles south of the Court House, and so easy of access from the city, daily, that we doubt not many who attend its sessions will prefer to reside in Chicago. It is understood that arrangements will be made for accommodation trains and commutation fares at a very cheap rate.

MANUFACTURE OF IRON.

The New York Tribune has the following item relative to a newly-discovered process in the manufacture of iron, to which we call the attention of those who make and use the article in this city:

"We have been shown various specimens of iron and steel made by a new process discovered by Mr. William Field, of Wilmington, Delaware. [illegible]"

And the New York Tribune might have safely added, "or all the protective tariffs" that ever "were devised by the wit of those who influence Congress to enact laws compelling the people to pay two prices for iron."

We appreciate the compliment the Chicago Times so often pays us by copying from other papers intelligence which first appeared in these columns. But that lively journal would get more credit for enterprise, and would give later news, if it should copy directly from this paper instead of waiting for the republication of our articles in papers at a distance. For instance: The Times of yesterday copied from the New York World an article purporting to be a summary of observations on the recent eclipse. Of this, two-thirds is taken bodily, word for word, from THE TRIBUNE's account of the eclipse as seen at Des Moines; only one-fourth of the article had any other source than this paper; and the remaining fraction is copied from our columns with the occasional change of a word. Had the World not undertaken to disguise its stolen goods it would have avoided one unlucky blunder, and if the Times had stolen at first hands it would not only have had an accurate instead of a garbled report, but would have escaped being, as usual, ten days behindhand. We can assure our inexperienced neighbor that the best way to get the news is to read the leading newspapers diligently.

Asa Packer, of Pennsylvania.

The Copperheads of Pennsylvania are even more fortunate in their selection of a Gubernatorial candidate than their brethren in Ohio. [illegible]

[illegible]

The New York Citizen (Democratic) is greatly disgusted at Pendleton's nomination, and asserts that Ohio "need not send any delegates to the next National Democratic Convention until she has redeemed herself from Republican rule." It adds: "It may be very pleasant for Mr. Pendleton to be nominated and defeated over and over again in his attempts to secure the position of Governor, but it will never help the triumph of Democracy. If the men of Ohio want to help the Republicans they may join the opposition openly, and not try to serve it under the guise of Democracy."

[illegible]

General F. T. Dent, in a letter to a friend in Rensselaer County, N. Y., says: "No one of the name of Dent holds an office conferred by Grant. I am the only one of four brothers who holds a Federal office. I am an officer of the army, a position I have held for twenty-six years. My brother, Judge Lewis Dent, is spoken of for Governor of Mississippi, so I hear. The people of Mississippi have as much the privilege of choosing for themselves a Governor as the State of New York has, and are as free from the dictation of General Grant in their selection as I presume New York would be."
